THE WHOLESALE KANSAS MURDERER, Ills Positive Identification - 81x Years Among

On the 9th of March, 1873, Dr. William H.

York left Fort Scott on horseback for his home in Independence, Kansas. He never arrived at home. On the 28th of March the Laurence Tribune gave a brief account of his disappearance and hinted at foul play. York was well known throughout the State—a brother of Col. A. M., York, whose expose of old Senator Pomeroy ad at that time made famous. The story of York's disappearance was now in every mouth. and every effort was put forth to solve the mys-tery of his absence. Rivers were dragged, spots fit for an ambush were probed foot by foot lonesome places were quested as a keen hound scents a trail that is cold, and still no traces of the lost man were discovered. Not a that Dr. York had been murdered-not a sign deed death had overtaken him unawares. He was traced to Cherryvale, in Labette County. but no further. There all track and trace of

About two miles south of Cherryvale. In a in dimension, lived the Bender family. There were four of them-father, mother, son, and were four of them—father, mother, son, and daughter. The mother was a Spiritualist. She called herself a medium; the neighbors called her a she-devil. She had a way of boiling herbs and roots that were supposed to have charms and spells about them, and she dealt in incantations. She was repulsive in aspect—tall, angular, and scrawny, with hard, steel-gray eyes, and thin, ragged gray hair straggling over her temples. The family seem to have been totally under the influence of this ungainly creature. Her word with them was law. The Bonders ostensibly kept a grocery. A sign was displayed in front of their rude dwelling. The only article they dealt in was cheap native wine, which was served on the spot. There were two rooms in the house, one used as a kitchen and dining room, and the other as a sleeping spartment.

While the excitement over the mysterious which was served on the spot. There were two rooms in the house, one used as a kitchen and dining room, and the other as a sleeping apartment.

While the excitement over the mysterious disappearance of Dr. York was at its height a party of Cherryvale citizens dropped in at the Bender mansion and casually inquired of the family if they had at any time during the past six weeks seen anything of York. The answer was in the negative, and the subject was dropped. The visit and the questioning of the Cherryvale party had a strange effect upon the Benders. They suddenly disappeared; nor were they seen again till their apprehension at Fremont. Neb., less week.

A man riding into Cherryvale from the country one day was impressed by the deserted appearance of the Bender place. He entered the yard. In the stable he found a dead calf. There was every indication from the appearance of the Bender place. He entered the yard. In the stable he found a dead calf. There was every indication from the appearance of the miserable creature that it had starved to death. The man walked up to the house, opened the door and looked in. Not an article of household furniture had been removed, but the dust lay heavy on everything. It was suspicious. The man want to Cherryvale and told his story, Senator A. M. York, the brother of the missing man, was there. To his suspicious mind the sudden and strange flight of the Bender family was a revelation. He had found the first clue to his lost brother. He divriged his suspicions, and a band of men accompanied him to the Bender farm. The front room of the house was carefully searched, every crack and crevice being minutely looked into and subjected to the application of rods and levers to see if the flooring was either hollow or loose. Nothing came of it. No blood spots appeared. The floor was solid. The walls were solid. Next the party searched the back room. The beds were removed. In their flight the Benders had left everything untouched.

A slight depression was noticed in the floor, which upon c the work of discovery went on. One after another were laid bare the graves of ten murdered people. Most of the bodies were identified and the roster of recognized victims were as follows:

GEO. W. LONGCAR, Miss LONGCAR, HENRY P. MCKENZI

W. F. MCEROTT, HENRY F. MCRENZIE. PETER BOYLE.

TWO MEN UNKNOWN.

The body of the second daughter of Mr. Longcar was not found. It was buried in the curner of the garden that was not carefully probed. These victims had probably been attracted to the Bender house by the conspicuously displayed grocery sign. A stranger was inveigled into the death trap, and invited to a glass of wine or something to eat. As he sat at the table in the back room one of his treacherous hosts smote him with a handmer, crushing in his skull, and killing him instantly. But to insure death his throat was ripped from ear to ear, and he was hurriedly drouped through the trap door into the bloody cavern beneath. In the dead of night the body was removed to the garden and buried.

These ghastly crimes were committed solely for gold. Whosver entered the Bender mansion alone and with money, it mattered not how little, died like a brute.

Longcar was one of Dr. York's neighbors, and had started for lows with a view to locating permanently. Casually stopping in at the Bender place he was brutally murdered. His skull was masked to a jeily, his throat cut and his body mutilated. His little child had evidently been tossed into the grave upon the mangled corpse and buried slive.

The discovery of the inhuman butcheries perpetrated by the Bender family was made seven years ago. For seven years diligent search for the bloody murderors has been pursued in every land upon the face of the earth. Up to four days ago the search was unavailing. But justice, though tardy, is sure, and once in the toils of a grossly outraged in w, the Benders will speedily auffer the penalty of their flendish atroetics. The gallows upon which they die should be built so high that all time world might see and enjoy the death throes of the most inhuman wretches with which civilization has been cursed ince the days of Sawney Bean and his incostuous family of cannibais.

How the Capture of the Elder Bender and his Wife was Effected.

A man was arrested by Sheriff Gregg at Richland three days ago, and he is now lodged travelling eastward on foot. They had stopped they made inquiries as to whether anything had yet been discovered of the Bender family, who yet been discovered of the Bender family, who formerly lived in Kansas. Their talk and actions excited suspicion, which was further strengthened by their answers to questions asked them. They speared excited and told conflicting stories as to who they were and where they were from; said they had lived five or six years among the Indians; that they had been up in the Niobrara country, and that they were not the Benders. Ingenious questioning was brought to bear on them, and the story flogilly came out.

ware not the Benders. Ingenious questioning was brought to bear on them, and the story finally came out.

While they were together in jail a conversation was overheard between them on the 27th of July, which was taken down by parties who were concealed near by. The old man, who is apparently over 60 years of age, said to her: "I knew if we came to Kansas that they would hang us before we would be there two hours. We would not ataud a ghost of a show. If I have to die, I want to die with you and be buried with you. I am going crazy. I know I have to die, I want to die with you and be buried with you. I am going crazy. I know I have to die, I want to die with you and be buried with you. I am going crazy. I know I have to die, I want that rasor in here before I start for Kansas."

"They would not let you have it. They are afraid of losing their reward," she said.

He continued: "I know you'll give me away, but you cannot save yourself. Oh! my first wife. She was a good woman. You don't care for me. You mustn't think you can escape by giving me away. Don't you cry."

Here they were interrupted by some noise, and would say no more. The parties were afterward soparated, and the old man was told that she had been taken to Kansas. He sppeared to feel very bad, but said little. She was then questioned and asked to give the whole story, which was finally got out of her, as appears in the answers given to the questions put to her. The old woman said the Benders had to run away from Illinois. They were in the same business there that they were afterward in in Kansas.

"was with the old man," the woman said.

nersons murdered was always divided among the Benders. I think my husband never got any of it. The garden was full of graves, and the cellar full of dead bodies. Dr. York's brother was murdered while I was there. He was a single man, I think about 35 years old. The dining room of the house was the room which the sliding trap was under. A person would sit down at the table to eat, and the slides were moved and the person would fall into a deep cellar. I don't know how deep the cellar was. They would kill anybody then who would come to the house, rich or poor, for fear they might inform on them. They killed some persons that had no money at all. We went with the Benders from the place of the murder to the railroad station. I don't know what town. There they took the train south. They would not take us along. The old man told the Benders that if they would not give them money he and the old man would tell on them. They didn't say anything to that. I have seen a good many people killed at Bender's house, my husband was sleek at Bender's house, and I was waiting on him. I think there was more than ten persons killed while I was in the house. The Benders talked freely about these murders in my presence. The old man went by the name of John Bender in Kansas.

The old man, when he was told that she had confessed by degrees, told his story: "I was only one night at Bender's house," he said. "That day a young man came from California, and stopped at Bender's to get something to eat. He asked Kate what made the house smell so. She said it was nothing. He said he would not stay over night in the house; he would go and get people to search the house, and when the people came they found some bodies under the house, six or seven of them. When the Bender's away that it was so the firm of the covered them with dirt. The man from California, and stopped at Bender's to get something to eat. He asked Kate what made the house smell so, She said it was nothing. He said he would not stay over night in the house, the would go and get OMARA, Nob., July 31.—All doubt is now removed. The original John Bender and wife are in the grasp of the law. Further developments in the case of the old man and woman lately captured and now in jail in Fremont, Nob., show that they are undoubtedly the Kansas butchers whose crimes gave them a worldwide notoriety a few years ago. A Mr. Hooflan, who for the past six years has been a resident of Fremont, was for two years prior to July 16, 1873, a neighbor of the Bender family, and herded cattle within three-quarters of a mile of their house on Agreese Crock, a few miles northeast of Independence, and about the same distance from the Osace Mission, on the main thorough fare from Independence to the latter piace. He had seen the Benders guite often in that time, and had become quite well acquainted. Hearing of the arrest of the old man and woman, he went to the jail to see them, and, if possible, identify them. As he entered the room in which the old man was confined, the latter looked at him very closely. Hooflan shoved his hat to the back of his head.

"Yes," replied the old man," I know you, but I can't place you."

"Don't you know the man that used to herd near your place in Kansas?" Mr. Hooflan inquired.

The old man became excited, "My God, yes," he answered. "How did you come here?"

"Why, all of Labette County are up here to see you, the herder said.

The old man's voice dropped. He furtively eyed Mr. Hooflan." You know that I never done any harm in my life," he said in a plaintive tone.

"Well, if you haven't," returned the drover. "they're lying terribly about you." From the Kansas City Pime one any harm in my life, "he said in a plaintive tone.

"Well. If you haven"t," returned the drover.

"they're lying terribly about you."

The old man moistened his lips and drew a long breath. "Well." he said, "my name is not Bender."

"Your name may not be Bender," said the herder, "but you told me repeatedly that was your name in Kansas, and it's no use for you to deny it here."

"I was there." said the old man. "and remember you distinctly, but I had nothing to do with any of those murders."

Did you ever see anybody murdered there?"

Mr. Hoodan asked.

"I saw eleven persons murdered there," the old man coolly replied.

"Was there more than one child murdered?"

the herder inquired.

old man coolly replied.

"Was there more than one child murdered?" the herder inquired.

"There were two buried," the old man answered.

"How do you know?"

"Why. I saw them taken out of the room asleep and put into the grave. It was in an out bedroom."

"There is no use saying that there was no bedroom in the house." Mr. Hoedian remarked.

I was in the back room," said the old man.

You couldn't see into the peach orchard from the back room."

"But I seen them in the grave the next day," the old man said.

"How could you see them?" the herder asked.

"They were covered up. Did you take the dirt off of them?"

"They were covered up. Did you take the dirt off of them?"

"They were only buried six inches under the ground," the old man replied.

"That's a ile." exclaimed a Mr. Shed, who was listening to the conversation. "You can't see six inches under the ground."

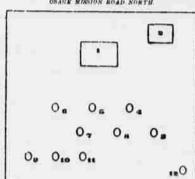

The old man then confessed that he helped to bury them, burst out crying and exclaimed."

The old man then confessed that he helped to bury them, burst out crying and exclaimed."

On being told he would have to go to Kansas he swore that he would have to go to Kansas he swore that he would not go. He said that he would go anywhere else, and would kill him self before he would go there. Hoofian showed him a plan of the house and surroundings, which he acknowledged was correct.

Hoofian then went and saw the woman. She began laughing when she saw him. When asked if she knew him she anawered. "Yes. I do know him. How do you do. Mr. Huffan?" the name she was wont to use.) I never expected to see you any more. I don't want to talk to you here. We are captured at last, and they will hang us. You know that That's John Bender, There's no use denying that any longer. I'm going to toil the truth from the start. I told them that we would to caught if we came back this way on the main road. We were going tack East. We hind a hard time among the Indiane; very seldom saw a white person." She said the other child was buried in the southeast corner of the gardon. She

There would seem to be no further reason for doubt as to the identity of the prisoners, and that they are members of the only original Bender family. No legal investigation has yet been had, and this must be awaited before the world will be satisfied that the monster butchers of the age are at last in custofy. The woman claims that she is not Bender's wife; that the inter was left when they went south through the Cheetaw nation, in 1873, because she could not go further when they shandoned the team. She thinks the old woman died in 1876. Hoofian's description of the old Bender place agrees perfectly with that of other persons who have been there.
